

How do I determine which super account to pay an employee's contributions?

From 1 November 2021, you will no longer be able to automatically create a new super account in your default fund for employees who do not complete a choice of fund form. Instead, you'll need to contact the Australian Taxation Office (ATO) to determine if the employee has an existing ('stapled') super account, and if they do, pay your Superannuation Guarantee (SG) contributions into that account. Should the employee not complete a choice of fund form and the ATO determines that the employee does not have a 'stapled' account, you will need to setup the employee with an account in your default fund and pay future super contributions to that account.
